

Deliverable E — Exam-Day One-Pager

Scan this in the 10 minutes before you walk in. Then close it. You know this.

1. THE UNIVERSAL TEMPLATE (run this on ANY question)

"There are two ways to look at this — a consequentialist line and a deontologist line. The consequentialist says: do whatever gives the best outcome — fewest deaths, most lives saved. The deontologist says: some acts are wrong in themselves — you may never deliberately kill the innocent, even to win. My own view is ____ because ____. The strongest objection is ____ — but I'd reply ____." → Then ONE example. Done. (It's "outcomes vs rules" in a new costume every time.)

2. THE 3 QUESTIONS

- Q1 (Weeks 9–11): Nuclear / targeted killing / autonomous weapons. → Name the modern machine, then run the master key (outcomes vs rules) + the in bello rule it breaks (distinction).
 - Q2 (Weeks 1–8): Foundations + Just War Theory. → Define the term, split ad bellum vs in bello, take a side.
 - Q3 (Synthesis): Connect a foundation (1–8) to a hard case (9–11). → Pick a tool (DDE, liability, mala in se), apply it to nukes/drones/robots, land a stance.
-

3. THE RUBRIC (FORM WINS — ~75% of marks)

Knowledge · Clarity · Take a Position · Give a Reason. A crisp structure + a clear stance + one good reason beats a rambling expert. Every answer = "My view is ____ because ____." Never finish without an opinion.

4. NAME-DROP LIST (one correct name per answer is plenty — never swap them)

- Walzer — moral equality of combatants (any soldier may kill any soldier).
- McMahan — liability: responsibility for an unjust threat makes you a target, not the uniform.
- Rodin — national self-defence ≠ individual self-defence (protects institutions, not a life).
- Primoratz — terrorism = deliberate violence on innocents to coerce.
- Held — judge terrorism by the same standard as war; states can do it too.
- Sparrow (examiner) — robots: responsibility gap + "Robots and Respect."
- Nagel — "War and Massacre": absolutism vs utilitarianism; limits on whom/how.
- Anscombe — "War and Murder": pro just-war + Double Effect; pacifism erases the combatant/innocent line.
- Arkin — PRO killer robots: "ethical governor" kills fewer civilians than panicked soldiers.
- Byman — PRO drones (most precise tool) · Boyle — ANTI (blowback radicalises).

- Ward Wilson — Hiroshima may not have caused surrender; the Soviet invasion did.
 - Annan — R2P: "sovereignty as responsibility" · Coady — humanitarian war is open to abuse.
-

5. ONE LINE PER WEEK (if you blank, say this)

- W1 Foundations: Reject relativism; three stances (Realism/Pacifism/JWT); JWT splits into ad bellum vs in bello.
 - W2 Pacifism: Absolute (Tolstoy) vs contingent; Anscombe — pacifism is pernicious, erases the combatant/innocent line.
 - W3 Realism: Descriptive realism is often true; prescriptive realism is self-refuting ("should" is already moral).
 - W4 Jus ad bellum: Self-defence justifies war (Walzer); Rodin's challenge is the sharpest objection.
 - W5 Humanitarian war: "Sovereignty is no shield for atrocity" (Annan), but the bar to intervene must be high (Coady).
 - W6 Distinction: Only ever target combatants; civilians are immune because not responsible (Sparrow's robust line).
 - W7 Terrorism: Deliberate violence on innocents to coerce (Primoratz); on a consistent definition, states can do it too.
 - W8 Mala in se: Some means (torture, rape, poison) are evil in themselves; only a deontologist can explain why.
 - W9 Nuclear: Strategic nukes break every in bello rule at once — arguably mala in se; plus the deterrence paradox.
 - W10 Targeted killing: Defensible only if the target is genuinely liable and capture is impossible — signature strikes are hardest.
 - W11 Autonomous weapons: Responsibility gap + respect (Sparrow); Arkin says fewer civilians — but outcomes don't fill the gap. Side with deontology.
-

Breathe. State your view. Say "because." Give one example. You've got this.